We Have a Voice

pdw

Upon their arrival to campus this Fall, students were greeted with a major administrative decision, one that would affect a location to which many students felt connected. A new presidential house was to be built in front of the College Cabin on the land that had been donated to the college as a class gift by the Class of 1941. Upon hearing the news, students rallied together, wrote a news letter, petitioned, signed letters, contacted alumni, and voiced their opinions. The actions taken by the student body lead to a postponement of the building process. On October 24, 1996, the Board of Overseers rescinded their earlier decision to build a new presidential house on the property.

New Campus Minister and Provost and GC's Interim President

More changes at GC: Sylvia Shirk Charles filled the position of campus minister. She has implemented a reflective Morning Prayer format for Monday chapels and created out-of-state service opportunities for students during vacation.

John Yordy filled the new position of provost beginning January 1, 1997, marking the first appointed position on president Showalter's administrative team. Yordy was previously GC's chemistry department chair.

Henry Weaver served as interim president during the first semester. He was responsible for the duties of GC president until Showalter began the position in January.
